Forging International Links

Spinfield classrooms partner with Nepalese village school

The children of Spinfield School were greeted back for the spring term with the news of a second international partner school to forge new links and build relationships with. The new school is named The Mikey Medium English school and it is situated in the far west region of Nepal, in an area called Kailali. This is in addition to the school's link with the A.P. School in Rawalpindi, Pakistan and is part of the British Council Connecting Classrooms programme.

The Mikey Medium English school was founded from a chance meeting between a man named Mike Church, who was bicycling off the beaten trails through Nepal with friends, and a local man, Ujjwal Bhat, who dreamt of starting a school for the children of his village. This meeting was the beginning of Grassroots Education Nepal, and triggered the eventual funding of the school with seed money that Mike and his wife Ali collected in lieu of wedding gifts from their guests.

Spinfield received its full International School accreditation in September 2015 after two and a half years of working towards it. The children from Spinfield and the A.P. School in Rawalpindi, Pakistan carried out 18 joint projects, focusing on global and community issues such as Children's Rights, Fairtrade, Recycling, Honouring our Elders etc. The projects are designed to make the children aware of their place in our global community.

'Quality Education' is the three schools' first project of 2017. Children in all of the partner schools learnt about the need for quality education for all children as part of the 17 global goals for sustainable development, created by 193 world leaders in 2015. Children in Spinfield produced artwork, developed role-plays, wrote recounts and learnt about the work of Malala Yousafzai, who won the Nobel Peace prize for her work speaking out about the right to education. This work will be shared with the partner schools and in return the children of Spinfield will be able to see what each of the other schools have done.

Spinfield School has always been keen to develop international links with other schools. These links enable the children to gain an understanding into how children across the globe live. By completing joint projects and exchanging news and photographs, maintained by the international co-ordinators in all three schools, the children from each school develop relationships and are testament to the notion that the world is, indeed, a small place.
